JAN DE JONGE, EARLY PIONEER

General 34.
To perpetuate the memory of our forefathers, the original pioneers who founded the present City of Zeeland in the years 1847-1849, we have chosen our Grandfather and Grandmother, the late Jan De Jonge and his good wife, born Jannetje Den Herder, who may be considered fair average citizens of their time and environs, and their characters and attitudes may be considered fairly representative of the majority of their contemporaries.

Jan De Jonge was born during the troublous times connected with the fall of Napoleon Bonaparte's empire and the days when Napoleon was attempting to restore his former power following his escape from banishment to the Island of Elba (an island of 150 square miles, 100 miles northwest of Rome, off the west coast of Tuscany, Italy, population 25,000). Napoleon escaped from Elba, February 2, 1815, and he met his "Waterloo" at Waterloo, a small village eleven miles south of Brussels and sixty miles south of Goes, on June 18, 1815, Grandfather was nine weeks old when Napoleon met his fate, and Grandmother was born eleven years later. He was again banished, this time to St. Helena, a small island 47 square miles, 1220 miles off the west coast of Africa in the Atlantic Ocean, on July 15, 1815, where he died on May 5, 1821.

Following the Napoleonic wars, England was ruled by King George IV, and the Holy Alliance was formed by Austria, Germany and Russia, which, together with the exhausted conditions of the countries resulted in a few years of tranquility in which the Netherlands shared; but France remained very unstable, and political reforms could be obtained only by armed revolution, for which there was ample cause. When Charles X began to rule France in 1824, absolutism set in and many reactionary laws were enforced, so that the Parisians revolted in 1830 and drove Charles X out of France and the French people then elected Louis Philippe king. During this period Louis Bonaparte, nephew of the great emperor, who had ruled Holland under his uncle, made an attempt at insurrection in France in 1836, but failed. In 1840 he made a second attempt but failed again. In 1848, while Paris was in a state of anarchy he succeeded, again setting the whole of Europe in a state of turmoil. Thus Grandfather and Grandmother lived under very disturbing conditions all their lives until they emigrated to America in 1849. Napoleon III, as he was called, gave France despotic rule, and Europe much war.

Although the Netherlands was not directly involved in these wars, except the secession of Belgium during their time, the aftermath of the Napoleonic wars nevertheless was a scourge to the country, and much of this was attended by epidemics of highly contagious diseases, including bubonic plague.

Grandfather De Jonge was only 17 years of age when the Separation movement from the State Church in the Netherlands first developed. Both, the families of Grandfather and Grandmother joined this movement, so they were among the Separatists from their childhood and suffered all the persecutions that was the lot of those children; but the force of this persecution was well spent at the time of their marriage.

While he lived in the Netherlands, Grandfather De Jonge was a farm laborer, employed by Jan Smallegange, a farmer; he was of the poorer class, in common with the large majority of those early settlers in the Dutch colony of Western Michigan; only a limited number of them having any financial means for emigration to America. Those possessed of means included such men as Janne Van De Luyster, Jan Steketee, Jan Wabeke, Jan Smallegange, and Johannes Kaboord.

Grandfather De Jonge and his family of wife and three children came to Zeeland, Michigan, from the Netherlands in the year 1849, two years after the original colonists, because there were no financial means available to them at the time to emigrate with the first group; but Jan Smallegange provided for this two years later, when they came among a group under his leadership, arriving in the colony in June of 1849.

They crossed the Atlantic Ocean on the sailing vessel De Louvre, the male members of their company including (This list incomplete, and some of the christen names are unknown to us): Jan Smallegange, Van Coven, Padriaase, Wabeke, Lukas, J. Van De Have, Kommer Schadelee, Willem Van Loo, Cornelius Van Loo, Dirk Van Loo, P. Westrate, H. Westkerke, Pieter Smallegange, Paulus Adriaansen, P. Hoogenstel, A. Duinkerke, Cornelius Ver Burg, and Marinus Van Boven. These people spread over the colony and some of them located in Grand Rapids.

The group made the transatlantic voyage by sailboat from Amsterdam to New York, arriving there on May 2, 1849, then by Hudson River steamboat to Albany and the Erie Canal to Buffalo. From Buffalo by lake steamer to Milwaukee, then to Grand Haven, and on a scow, pushed by a tugboat, up Grand River to Grandville. From Grandville to Zeeland the trip was made afoot along the principal Indian trail (which had been widened and leveled to permit travel by ox-wagon), arriving at Zeeland on June 15, 1849. This Indian trail for many years was the only direct road from the colony to Grand Rapids. Beginning at Zeeland, the first remaining marks of this road that we remember were at the south east corner of Section 18 of Zeeland Township, at the intersection of Byron Road and 88th Avenue (East Main and Fairview Road). From this point it ran in a northeasterly direction, along the old Willem Van Laare place a distance of a half-mile. Other evidences remaining of this trail to Grand Rapids are the angling barn on the farm that once belonged to the late Gerrit Riemersma that faced it in Section 9, and the original Willem Leenhouts farm in Section 10. From there it skirted the low lands on their northwesterly margin, where it again shows up in a short piece of angling road in Section 36 of Blenden Township; then again y find it in the angling pieces of road north of Hudsonville in Section 20 of Georgetown Township, from which point it nearly followed the present Port Sheldon Road and Highway M-21 on into Grand Rapids.

The De Jonge clan is numerous in the Netherlands, but there is little chance for placing the Jan De Jonge family back very much farther than is given in this biography, we believe, because most laboring classes had no surnames before Napoleon ordered the census taken during his regime, giving surnames of all heads of families in the Netherlands. Prior to this most laboring people were recorded by adding the father's christen name, as Jan van Willem and his son would be Willem van Jan. Apparently the first was Jan De Jonge, who was knighted for valor and was awarded a coat of arms, living in the middle of the 15th century. Prior to that he evidently had no rank or surname.

Grandfather was born in the Gemeente of Zierikzee, Duiveland Province of Zeeland. When he was eight years old the family of his father moved to the Gemeente of 's Heer Arendskerke, Zuid-Beveland, about six statute miles southwest of the City of Goes all in the Province of Zeeland. There is probably no relationship of Grandfather's clan with this knighted person, although he was also a citizen and an officer of the Gemeente of Zierikzee.

When the party, which included Grandfather's family was about to arrive in the colony, fortunately inspired Grandmother's father, the original pioneer, Christiaan Marinus Den Herder, to believe his children, whom they were expecting, would arrive at Grandville that day, for he, together with his daughter Neeltje, later Mrs. Adriaanus Roosenraad, set out afoot to Grandville to intercept them there. When they arrived within a short distance from Grandville they met, the father carrying their three-year-old daughter, cornelia, on one arm and a big grip in the other hand, while Grandmother carried her one-year-old son, Christiaan, and ten-year-old son Willem came trudging behind wrestling another grip that was twice too large for him.

Grandmother De Jonge hailed this as one of the happiest occasions of her life. Although Grandmother was the only member of her family to have remained behind in the Netherlands, Grandfather was the only member of his family to emigrate to America during the first three decades of the colonial era. Grandmother's family which preceded her to America included her father and mother, her two sisters, Johanna, 21, and neeltje, 19, and her three brothers, Jan, 26, Marinus, 24, and Jacob, 13. The sad feature of this reunion was the absence of Johanna, who had died in May 1848

Much correspondence with their relatives in the Netherlands continued, which mail was exceedingly slow (sometimes requiring six months for a return message to arrive) for several years, until Grandfather's father died in 1871; but it evidently continued sometime later because after ten years Grandfather provided transportation from the Netherlands to Zeeland, Michigan, for his half-brother, Johannes, and his family of wife and two sons, Willem and Jan, also arranging for a farm on which they lived a few years. Johannes died a short few years after coming here due to an infection in an injured finger, probably due to tetanus.

History tells us of the poverty and privations during the early years endured by the early settlers, but poverty and want seem still to have been greater for some in the Netherlands, because people here occasionally sent material relief to near relatives whom they had left behind. It occurred for some years that that the correspondence usually was accompanied by contributions. Grandmother has told of how they sometimes placed a $5 gold piece beneath the wax seal that closed the first-class letters of those days, the softened wax being impressed with the family's signet ring. Coin mailed within the letter was not considered safe, but there never seems to have been complaint of failure to receive coins sent in this manner.

Grandfather De Jonge was an austere man, about 5 ft. 5 in. tall, stockily built, and weighing about 175 lbs. at the most. His bushy brown eyebrows gave the impression of scowling which did not lend to popularity among children; but he was a big-hearted man in spite of his punctiliousness. He was a slave to work and had little patience with any indication of indolence. He retired from farming, his life's vocation, when strength failed him, in 1884.

Grandfather and Grandmother De Jonge were both sincere and devout Christians from their youthful days. They, in common with others, came to America to find religious freedom and relief from the doom of poverty. They were thorough-going individualists, which principles they maintained in their religion, social, political, and economic life. They were masters of their own conduct which was imbued with the high moral principles of those pioneers. One good custom, now completely neglected by most people, will illustrate something of their sturdy Christian characters: It was the custom of Grandfather's family, while the children were still at home, to hold what was called "Sabbath preparation." On Saturdays all work, such as chores about the farmstead, that might be required for Sunday, were completed before dark, and what might have been done on Sunday was left until Monday. We can remember one chore we always had for Saturday was the polishing of shoes for Sunday wear. In the evening, prayer was offered by Grandfather before the evening meal, following which meal he would, as on all other days, read a chapter from the Bible and then discourse on part of it for a half-hour before closing with the night prayer. Following that, there was no "going to town" for the boys and girls as they do today; but after an hour of quiet meditation, they all went to bed.

Grandfather was a sincerely religious man, and he could discourse on a wide range of religious subjects by the hour, enjoying it greatly. Meanwhile we were expected to exhibit reverence in respectful attention. He was rather deaf during his later years which made conversation with him difficult, and although he enjoyed mutual discussion, it usually soon drifted into one of his discourses because his visitors found it difficult to keep the conversation clear. He was one of the early seceders from the First Reformed Church (De Groote Kerk) here, and for many years was elder of the First Christian Reformed Church.

There was at first no seceding church in Zeeland, but those seceding from the Reformed Church at Zeeland were organized as a branch of the seceding church of Noordeloos and were under the pastorate of Rev. Koene Van Den Bosch, who for a considerable time was the only ordained minister associated with the seceder. Rev. Hendrik Geert Klijn of Grand Rapids for a few months joined them, but he soon returned to the Reformed Church. The secession did not have much following at Zeeland for some time, because Rev. Cornelius Van Der Meulen was well liked and had the faculty for keeping his church united. But gradually the seceding group was increased by arriving immigrants and others so that their numbers exceeded that of the church at Noordeloos and they felt warranted in organizing an independent congregation at Zeeland; But Rev. Van Den Bosch succeeded in preventing this until 1862, when dissatisfaction resulted in a number of them organizing "D. Ware Gereformeerde Kerk" early in the year 1862. Grandfather seceded from the Reformed Church during the troublous times of

Rev. Stobbelaar's pastorate in 1862 and he was one of the organ of the Old School Scotch Presbyterian Church at Zeeland in March 1862, and served as deacon there until he left to join the "Wet Gereformeerde Kerk" in 1868.

Of course, all discoursing was done in the Holland language which we understood very well, and it taught us the meaning of many difficult Dutch words and the meaning of considerable "deep thought." Although Grandfather was only thirty-four years of age and Grandmother was only twenty-three years when they arrived here neither learned to use the English language except for a word now and then; but they understood much of it--at least we always were careful to use respectful language within their hearing.

Grandfather and Grandmother with their three children came here with "the clothes on their back." Soon after their arrival they located in a log cabin that had been deserted by others, situated one-half mile south and three-eighths mile east of the intersection of East Main Avenue and Fairview Road, living there two or three years. During this time he worked for others "from dawn till dusk" to provide for his family, never earning more than 50¢ per day. It must be remembered that money was a scarce article in those days, and seldom was secured except for special purposes such as paying taxes, church contributions, and the like. Barter was the principal means of exchange, the money value being placed on all commodities, the amount being charged to account for settlement on occasion. If too great sums were involved the debtor might be asked to deliver grain, produce, or wood for it as he might be able.

Two or three years after locating in Zeeland, Grandfather bought on contract from Jannes Van De Luyster, on contract, 20 acres of land one-half mile east of the Village of Zeeland. This was the $W\frac{1}{2}$ $SE\frac{1}{4}$ $SW\frac{1}{4}$ of Section 17. T5N, R14W, Zeeland Township. Later he bought the $SW\frac{1}{4}$ $SW\frac{1}{4}$ of the same section. Of all this he became sole owner. Later he bought 50 acres more in two parcels.

This land he cleared and converted into a prosperous farm homestead, where he lived nearly thirty-five years, until 1865, when his son John, upon his marriage, took possession of the old homestead. After having owned his sixty acres for some years, he sold five acres of it in the southwest corner to his daughter, Cornelia, upon her marriage to Anthony Johannes Van Koevering on June 21, 1866, which he, in 1883, repurchased to make his home there. About ten years later, he sold this place to his children, Mr. and Mrs. Simon Wierda, after which he made his home in a house he owned at the northeast corner of Washington and Elm Streets, Zeeland, where he lived the remainder of his days.

Both Grandfather and Grandmother departed this life within ten months of each other. He passed away April 29, 1899, aged 84 years and 4 days. She passed away February 21, 1900, aged 73 years 2 months, and 7 days. They were interred in Zeeland Cemetery.

When the first pioneers arrived here in 1847 the area which is now Zeeland and vicinity was one dense virgin forest, just as was most of Western Michigan, and these forests stood in the way for growing the crops with which to feed both man and beast. So they set about to destroy much timber that would be invaluable today. There was no other way to acquire that food except by selling the products of their own making, which included barrel stave split shingles, firewood, tanning bark, hand sawn plank, and the like, but in all this there was an overproduction which made the efforts hardly worth while. Some meat was secured by hunting wild animals, and hogs were allowed to run wild to feed on beech nuts and acorns, but the meat supply remained scarce.

During the two years before Grandfather and Grandmother arrived here, the pioneers had met up with many Yankees, who among others, taught them in woodcraft: that it was wrong to chop into a tree on all sides in order to fell it, which had happened in some serious accidents; instead, the pioneers had already learned how to drop a tree within inches of the intended spot by proper notching and sawing. In clearing their lands, timber that was considered valuable for market, including white and black oak which was usable for barrel staves, plank, fence rails, and the like; pine and cedar for shingles and handmade lumber, birch, beech and hard maple for firewood; and a wide variety of the trees for timbers and farm tools was cut and salvaged first. Basswood was ideal for wooden shoes and ox-yokes because it was easily worked, and it was light and tough. Hickory and ironwood were ideal for ox-yokes-bows, easily bent to shape after steaming, and they were excellent for ax-handles. But many trees, including sycamore, hemlock, elm, and others were burned as of no use and in the way for clearing.

The desirable timber was first cut and utilized for market. The best parts of the trees were sawn to proper lengths. Oak logs were cut up to three feet long, turned on end and split into barrel staves with a special knife and a wooden mallet. The shingles were made in the same way from pine or cedar blocks, after which they were smoothed and tapered with a draw-knife on a special shingle horse.

Products made in the woods were hauled by ox-team to the scow landing place west of Groningen from where they were taken to Holland for reshipment to Chicago and other places. Dealers usually bought the products at the shipping dock at Groningen or at Holland. Water levels have gone down very much since those one hundred years ago, so that the lake channel at the outlet have been dredged to permit docking of steamers. The destruction of the woods in the areas of Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and other parts has resulted in the loss of much water as well as from the drainage of the lakes. Local sawmills were introduced before the Civil War, which put an end to the building of log houses, and much more of the remaining valuable timber was utilized.

Much of the work of the earliest days was done by men in crews, because slashing trees, building log piles and burning, clearing lands for cropping, constructing buildings and fences harvesting hay and small grain, and so on, all of it was done by manual labor, was heavy and tedious work requiring many hands for quick results. These crews up to a dozen men went from one member's place to another's, exchanging labor, day for day, until all was evened up or the work was done.

Soon there were many roads laid out for use by the settlers quite thickly scattered to some distance around the village, but at best they remained sand trails for a long time. We can remember very distinctly of money being raised by Zeeland merchants to improve and gravel the roads to Vriesland, Overisel, and Borculo to encourage trade for Zeeland before the beginning of the 20th century, and it was at least ten years later before paved roads came into the picture. For years, only stumps were removed to permit a nearly straight lane, but many were the stumps remaining to extend large roots to bump over. Of wet lands, through which roads had to be built, there was much more than today, but the builders overcame this by the "corduroy" method of placing equal-sized tree trunks crosswise of the road lane against each other and covering these with earth. This process was repeated as often as necessary to make a stable roadway, and sometimes it required several years of building before these roads held up permanently. If one should dig below the road in the "Vriesland Swamp" he would find many a log there today.

Grandfather De Jonge took part in all these activities until the forests were all gone and substantial roads were built and good markets were established for the abundant yields of the numerous wide and spreading farms. I can remember that he had a large healthy apple orchard adjoining the east side of his farm yard before the scale and other insects came to destroy it, an orchard where for thousands of years mammoth forest trees had grown. We can remember that he had his fields all surrounded with sturdy rail fences before the time barbed wire was introduced, and we can remember his sleek herd of cattle feeding on the lush pastures and drinking from a surface water pond before the wind-mill pump was thought of here, or the watering trough was warmed by a wood burning heater. We can remember his warning us to keep away from the great horses reaching their long muzzles out to him expecting a helping of grain; and to keep away from the big Holstein bull securely tied in his stall. We can remember the endless circuit of the horses as they circled the "horsepower," pushing the sweeps that set the clattering threshing machines agoing with a deafening din. We can remember old Rover, the big Newfoundland dog that had to be tricked into the milkhouse to do his chore at churning in the treadmill. We can remember Fietje, the little white lap dog that was good for nothing except to be fondled. We can remember old Nellie, the gray buggy horse, too old to eat hay, but living on and on by the grace of Grandfather and his love for the old mare. And we can remember the luscious peaches and muskmellons in his garden, which tempted us tremendously, behind the high board fence that kept marauders out, but of which he was quite liberal.

Jan De Jonge was born in Zierikzee, Province of Zeeland, the Netherlands, April 25, 1815, the son of Willem and Jacomina De Jonge and he had one brother Marinus and one sister Gertruda, also one half-brother Johannes and one half-sister Len the latter two children of his father and his stepmother. All his immediate relatives remained in the Netherlands, except his half-brother Johannes, who immigrated to Zeeland, Michigan in 1881 together with his wife Johanna and his two children Willem and Jan. The latter became a nonagenarian, still living in Borculo in 1952. Grandfather's father, Willem De Jonge, was born in Zierikzee, March 17, 1789, where he was married and lived until 1823, when grandfather was eight years old, then making his home in 's Heer Arendskerke, where he died April 2 1871, at the age of eighty-two years.

Jan De Jonge was united in marriage to Pieterella Moerman at 's Heer Arendskerke, Province of Zeeland, the Netherlands, on October 26, 1837, and they were the parents of one child, Willem, born at 's Heer Arendskerke, March 18, 1839. His wife died on January 1, 1843, aged 26 years.

1. The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions and activities. It emphasizes that this is essential for ensuring transparency and accountability in the organization's operations.

2. The second part outlines the specific procedures and protocols that must be followed when recording transactions. This includes details on how data should be collected, stored, and reviewed to ensure its integrity and reliability.

3. The third part addresses the role of the management team in overseeing the record-keeping process. It stresses that management must ensure that all staff are properly trained and that the necessary resources are provided to support the system.

4. The fourth part discusses the importance of regular audits and reviews to identify any discrepancies or areas for improvement. It suggests that these should be conducted at regular intervals and by independent parties to maintain objectivity.

5. The fifth part concludes by reiterating the overall goal of the document: to establish a robust and reliable system for recording and managing organizational data. It encourages all stakeholders to work together to achieve this goal.

His second marriage was with Jannetje Den Herder at 's Heer Arendskerke on July 31, 1844, where they lived until the time they emigrated to America five years later. Besides his son, Willem, they were the parents of twelve children, four of whom died in infancy: Marinus, born at 's Heer Arendskerke, in September 1845; died in October, 1845. Marinus, born at Zeeland, Michigan, September 4, 1850, died July 21, 1854; Jan, born October 11, 1852, died July 21, 1854 (These latter two both died of diphtheria on the same day); Jacob, born March 17, 1857, died August 28, 1859. The others, who attained maturity, are Willem, Cornelia, and Christiaan, all born at 's Heer Arendskerke, the Netherlands, and Johannes, Jacomina Helena, Jan, Marinus, Jacob, and Helena Jacomina. Grandfather De Jonge had seventy descendants. at the time of his death on April 29, 1899, fourteen of whom had died before that date. He attained the age of 64 years and 4 days.

Grandmother De Jonge was born Jannetje Den Herder, at Borselen, Province of Zeeland, the Netherlands, December 14, 1826, the daughter of Christiaan Marinus Den Herder and Cornelia De Jonge-Den Herder, both of which parents emigrated to Zeeland, Michigan, among the original pioneers of 1847. Her father was born at Borssele, January 31, 1796, and died at Zeeland, Michigan, May 7, 1883, aged 87 years. Her mother was Cornelia De Jonge-Den Herder, born at Borssele on January 3, 1794, and she died at Zeeland, June 26, 1862, aged 68 years. Mrs. Jannetje De Jonge died at Zeeland on February 21, 1900, aged 73 years, 2 months, and 7 days; following her husband in death after 10 months and 22 days.

The following is the genealogy of the several families, so far as they are in my possession on this date.

The first of these is the fact that the government has been unable to raise the necessary funds to meet its obligations.
 This is due to a number of factors, including the fact that the government has been unable to collect the necessary taxes, and the fact that the government has been unable to borrow the necessary funds from the international market.
 The second factor is the fact that the government has been unable to implement the necessary reforms to the economy. This is due to a number of factors, including the fact that the government has been unable to implement the necessary reforms to the legal system, and the fact that the government has been unable to implement the necessary reforms to the education system.

The third factor is the fact that the government has been unable to implement the necessary reforms to the social system. This is due to a number of factors, including the fact that the government has been unable to implement the necessary reforms to the health care system, and the fact that the government has been unable to implement the necessary reforms to the housing system.
 The fourth factor is the fact that the government has been unable to implement the necessary reforms to the environment. This is due to a number of factors, including the fact that the government has been unable to implement the necessary reforms to the forest management system, and the fact that the government has been unable to implement the necessary reforms to the water management system.

The fifth factor is the fact that the government has been unable to implement the necessary reforms to the military. This is due to a number of factors, including the fact that the government has been unable to implement the necessary reforms to the military structure, and the fact that the government has been unable to implement the necessary reforms to the military equipment.
 The sixth factor is the fact that the government has been unable to implement the necessary reforms to the judiciary. This is due to a number of factors, including the fact that the government has been unable to implement the necessary reforms to the judicial system, and the fact that the government has been unable to implement the necessary reforms to the judicial process.
